FOUNDATION 9 ENTERTAINMENT, INC. CONTINUES TO CREATE BEST-SELLING EDUCATIONAL TITLES

Largest Independent Game Developer in North America Developed Three of the Top 10 Selling Educational Games in July

LOS ANGELES, CA – August 16, 2005 – Foundation 9 Entertainment, Inc., the largest independent developer in North America, today announced that its educational software titles continue to lead the market in quality and sales. With a recent article in the New York Times highlighting the top 10 educational software products, Foundation 9 was the developer of three of these titles, including the top title, Mavis Beacon Teaches Typing® 16 Deluxe.

The list of best-selling games, compiled by industry research firm NPD Funworld, also listed other top 10 selling Foundation 9 developed titles including, Mavis Beacon Teaches Typing® 12, , Dora the Explorer™: Fairytale Adventure, and Blue's Clues™: Preschool.

“Foundation 9 Entertainment’s commitment to creating quality children’s titles that foster education is a result of our dedication to youth and our belief that video games can have a positive impact on early education,” said Mark Loughridge, co-chairman of Foundation 9 Entertainment, Inc. “As a company that is concerned with the content available to young children, Foundation 9 is ensuring the highest quality educational titles possible, and giving parents the ability to choose software that can enrich their child’s mind.”

Foundation 9 has also taken home three prestigious BESSIE Awards for educational and edutainment software this year, for Dora the Explorer: Fairytale Adventure - Best Early Learning Interactive Story, Blue's Room: Blue Talks - Best Early Learning Language Arts Program, and SpongeBob Square Pants Typing - Best Middle School Keyboarding Program.
